

Charte d'édition pour les productions des ateliers MATH.en.JEANS

1. All MATH.en.JEANS productions that are posted on MATH.en.JEANS website are written by the students coached by their teachers; they are approved by the researcher of the Math.en.Jeans workshop. They give an account on the research of the workshop with the results and proofs.
2. It can be
  - an article
  - a research narration (for students up to middle school level)
  - a poster
  - a video
  - slides
  - or anything else
3. At the beginning of it (on the first page for an article) one must find
  - The title of the work, students' names, their levels, their school, the twinned schools, teachers' names, researchers' name with the name of their universities.
  - An understandable description of the subject.
  - An announcement of the main results.
4. To be accepted, it must follow these rules :
  - The subject should not be a purely academic exercise or problem, nor a simple documentary search, and should not be limited to a list of closed questions.
  - Any claim must be clear, can be checked and if possible proved. If a claim is admitted it should be noted as admitted. The status of the claims (definition, theorem or conjecture...) has to be given.
  - The contents must be understandable by students of the same level.
  - For an article, there must be at least one result which is something new for the students about the problem.

The editorial board will not accept any article (or other media) if these rules are not applied. Models for articles can be found on MATH.en.JEANS website. They must be followed.

5. Any article (or other media) will be looked at and scientifically validated by referee. When approved by the editorial board, it will be posted on MATH.en.JEANS public website without major modifications with, if necessary, some "edition notes". It can happen that an article is published in a journal.
6. Any article (or other media) should be send in an editable form (tex, docx, odt for the articles), with page numbers for the articles (see the models). All images must be readable of high quality, with a legend and given in separated files.
7. If the format of an article is special (colors, too much pages, etc...), it cannot be published in a printed version.
8. If an article is posted on MATH.en.JEANS website before July 15th, it will be dealt with by the editorial board before December 31st.
